The importance of vertical and horizontal policy coherence in migration and development: an integral approach to mainstreaming migration into development planning

Platform for Partnerships

Cecile Riallant: Programme Manager of the UN Joint Migration and Development Initiative and Senior Expert in Migration and Development, IOM
Main challenges:

• Migration affects and is affected by all areas of governance and development

• Policy incoherence occurs when there is either a lack of awareness of how a policy fits into the existing portfolio of policies, or when there is a lack of understanding of the causal relations leading to faulty assumptions regarding what the policy can achieve

• Vertical policy incoherence: obligatory for all children to attend school, including children of irregular parents vs schools expected to report on irregular migrants

• Horizontal policy incoherence: Anti-discrimination policies and access to decent work for all vs prohibition from entering the labour market for refugees

• If we want to truly ‘leave no-one behind’, all development action must consider migration and displacement with migrants and displaced persons being among the ‘furthest behind’
An integral approach:

- Need for Policy Coherence: - Definition: “pursue synergies to advance shared objectives, actively seek to minimise or eliminate negative side effects of policies, (and) prevent policies from detracting from one another or from the achievement of agreed-upon development goals”.

- How? Mainstream migration into development planning at both the local and national levels and link up through multi-level coordination

- Key success factors:
  - Multi-stakeholder coordination institutionalized
  - Allocate human and financial resources: from promise to action
  - Bottom-up and top-down approach: multi-level coordination
  - Migration from a rights based approach
  - Participation and inclusion of migrants throughout entire process
Based on lessons from two global programmes:
