Migration and development policy reviews (MDPRs)

The OECD Development Centre proposes a diagnostic tool for building a comprehensive migration and development policy for both developing economies and development co-operation partners

- Constraints: time, funds
- Needs, sequencing, prioritising
- Goals

- 360 degree
- Avoiding blind spots
- Bilateral, corridor approach

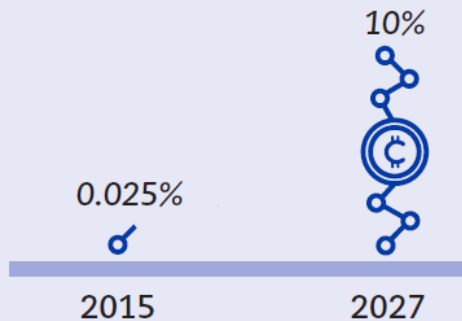

- What are the priorities in the country of origin, destination, corridor routes?
- What are the characteristics of migrants?
- What type of migration?

Development is being challenged like never before

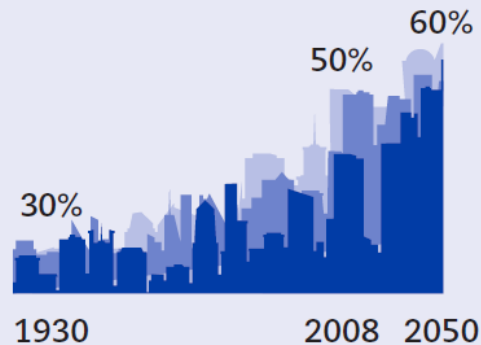

Disrupting technologies

% of global GDP stored on Blockchain

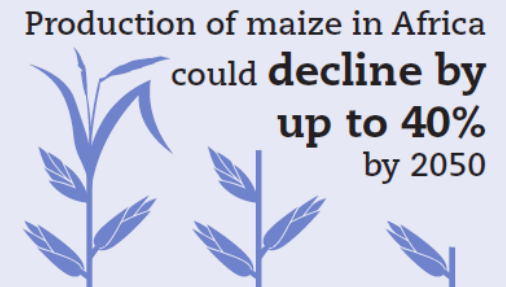

Social and demographic challenges

World urbanisation rates

Environment challenges

Climate change threatens global food security

What this means in practice

- If high skill = diploma recognition
- If rural migration = rural development
- If historical migration = pension agreement

- Qualitative interviews
- Analysis of current strategies
- Quantitative surveys

- Adequate data?
- Who is around the table?

- Input for UNMN workstream 2.2
- Mutual learning group

Migration and Development Guidelines

In 2019 AICS started an internal consultation on M&D approach, starting from the analysis of the current programmes implemented in Africa, most of them oriented on the so called “root causes approach”.

We are involving the different constituencies (Institutions, International Organizations, CSOs, PS, Academia) of the National Council for Development Cooperation to define M&D guidelines focusing on:

- new approaches beyond “root causes”
- mainstreaming migration in drafting new AICS activities
- strengthening engagement of the migrants communities living in Italy

Thank you
